Introduction

Transversal Competences: The Definition

The term ‘transversal competences’ has largely replaced the term ‘transferable skills’. These are the competences individuals have which are relevant to jobs and occupations other than the ones they currently have or have recently had. These competences may also have been acquired through non-work or leisure activities or through participation in education or training. More generally, these are competences which have been acquired in one context or to master a special situation/problem and can be transferred to another context.

Why Transversal Competences?

Despite the unprecedented levels of unemployment in European countries, still 32% of employers face difficulties with filling jobs due to the so-called “competences gap” while about 509,000 job vacancies are registered in the European ICT sector. The highly competitive European labour market requires increased transversal competences (TCs) key for employability that most young and adult learners, job-seekers and professionals are not well-aware of nor do they know how they can be assessed in view of improving their employability potential.

KeySTART2Work Project

KeySTART2Work aims to bridge the gap between the labour market needs and the labour force skills, upskilling young and adult learners through the development of an innovative ICT tool for self-assessment of Transversal Competences (TCs) of VET learners and transferability guidelines and recommendations for the creation of a Support Service for further training the TCs of VET learners. The service will be based on the Catalogue of Transversal Competences Key for Employability.

Development of the Catalogue

Each Partner has prepared a list of transversal competences (14-17 TCs), which in their opinion are key for employability. This led to creating a list of 15 transversal competences. Following a desk research Partners provided definitions of the abovementioned competences. During a questionnaire research VET learners were asked about the importance of these 15 TCs and interviews with career services, guidance units, VET providers, and social partners. Finally, focus groups in each Partner country retrieved feedback from the employers. These methods plus Partners’ final consultation led to the creation of the Catalogue encompassing 12 transversal competences key for employability.
